

Biography

Hello, my name's Cormac, I am a Belfast born Interaction Design student whose passion begins with user experience and beyond. Since beginning my studies at university my interest in digital design has amplified touching on a profound inner-love for good design. Ever since I was a teenager, I have wanted to create a story; an understanding to unlock meaning and purpose behind design. My goal is to achieve absolute prestigiousness in what I do or as I like to say, "Designing to the nearest pixel." I am also diverse in knowledge in the digital spectrum of design as I have many years of experience in graphic design, motion graphic, animations, sound design, videography and photography with also long-term experience in adobe products.

References

Jim McIlhatton (Manager of The Hunting Lodge)

As a manager who has worked with Cormac for so many years, I have watched him evolve from an ordinary shy kid to a man seeming with passion and enthusiasm for his job, his colleagues, and his customers. He has always naturally strived for excellence even on the duller of days as he consistently maintained composure to tackle any problem that got in his way. Cormac is an extremely outgoing and passionate kid. It was great to have him a part of our team.

Shane O'Neill (Teacher at De La Salle College)

Cormac is admired by all his peers and naturally assumed a role model status in all his classes and working groups. Leading by example, he set high standards for himself and his fellow students and could always be depended on. His punctuality and attention to detail remain first class.
